Musician and Mentor – a Legend, a Legacy

Know this busy music teacher? One whose studio was filled with the sound of piano all day every day, who gave lessons and masterclasses, taught summer school, adjudicated and examined across the land, presented recitals by advanced student pianists and visiting artists, provided scholarships, kept in touch with colleagues and former students, celebrated the fine arts, and - amid all that -helped to establish professional organizations, including ours, the Saskatchewan Registered Music Teachers' Association. Lyell Gustin was that music teacher, and his refined charismatic teaching and mentoring influenced countless students during his 70-year career. Insights shared by Gustin Studio graduates over the years give us an understanding of Dr. Gustin's pedagogical ideals and his artistic vision, a legacy of musical excellence.

The Musical Grove: experience, social environment, and musical identity

We have all heard the saying "the apple doesn't fall far from the tree", but why is that? Research demonstrates that experiences are what influence identity: what we do and who we do it with shape who we are. Drawing from a qualitative doctoral study on musical identities, 8 adolescent students share stories about their musical journeys and how they came to think of themselves as musicians. It seems that in order to construct a strong, salient identity as a musician, students' everyday experiences must point in this direction. This presentation will offer suggestions on how to shape the social environment to foster musical identity development in students, but will also encourage teachers to reflect on their own musical past as a compass that guided towards their current musical selves.

Through Chopin's Eyes: Editions and Filiation

This lecture-recital compares late piano works of Chopin in two aspects: (1) the sources consulted and cited by popular publications, and (2) Chopin as an editor of his music. I will compare present-day editions and historical sources and play different versions of a score to highlight editorial markings and their histories. Two questions this lecture will address are: "How can I evaluate an edition and define it as 'reliable'?" and "What purpose does this data serve for a performer or teacher?"
